"I want to edit my draft before I turn it in."

This is a common phrase for many students, especially if they have a looming deadline and a near finished draft.

In this workshop, we will tackle how to work within the final two stages of the writing process: editing and proofreading.

This will include discussion and practice surrounding finding lower order concern patterns, utilizing resources to help make informed decisions, and developing confidence in your own editing and proofreading skills.
